

JOHN J. NEAL, DDS, MS

Dr. Neal is a native Hoosier, hailing from northwest Indiana. He enlisted in the Navy after high school from 1989 to 1994, then attended college in Indiana and graduated from the Indiana University School of Dentistry in 2005. He has served as an active duty dental officer in the United States Navy since 2005. Following tours at Marine Corps Recruiting Depot, Parris Island and Naval Health Center Great Lakes, he completed Endodontic Residency training at the Naval Postgraduate Dental School in Bethesda, MD. There he received his Certificate in Endodontics and a Master's Degree from The George Washington University in 2010. His academic achievements include the Student Leadership Award while a senior in dental school, the Dean's Award for Academic Excellence as an endodontic resident, Board Certification as a Diplomate of the American Board of Endodontics in November 2014, and professional publications.

Dr. Neal is very active in education and organized Dentistry. He served on Staff at the Naval Postgraduate Dental School in the Research Department and as Program Director for Endodontics from July 2017- July 2020. He was President of the Edward C. Penick Endodontic Study Club in our Nation's Capital and currently serves as President-Elect and Mentorship Chair for the College of Diplomates of the American Board of Endodontics. He is an active member of the American Association of Endodontists, and the American Board of Endodontics. Dr. Neal and his family, wife Kelli and two sons have spent over 20 years of service in the United States Navy. He is finishing his active duty service at Naval Station Great Lakes, retiring in May 2025, then will be working as an associate endodontist with Cameo Dental Specialists in Chicago, IL..

In his free time, Dr. Neal enjoys spending time with his family and staying physically fit. He enjoys playing sports with his two sons (baseball, football, basketball and skiing) and travelling to explore new areas of the globe.